

valuable advice and assistance in shaping policy there. He was actively engaged in the successful completion of several farm bills. Mark worked to craft the language, negotiate, and iron out differences in conference with the House. He has communicated closely with the administration over the years, all in a very professional and thoughtful way.

Mark and his wife Rhonda are close friends of mine. Mark's personal qualities are impeccable. He is courteous and intelligent; he works hard, has a strong sense of responsibility, and has good judgment. I appreciate the way he has helped manage the administrative and legislative functions of my office, as well as the counsel he has provided me for the past 17 years.

I am confident that Mark will do an excellent job in helping develop options for the next farm bill. He will be a great resource for the administration, as well as for the Congress.

We will miss him here in the Senate. I am pleased to congratulate him on his nomination and extend my thanks to him for the great job he has done in the Senate.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK C. FIALA

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Frank Fiala, superintendent of the Keweenaw National Historical Park. After nearly 32 years of Federal service, Frank will be retiring in January. Frank's service to our country began in the U.S. Air Force where he worked as a medic from 1969 to 1973. His career then transitioned to the National Park Service, where he has worked to protect our country's natural and historic treasures and to make them available for the public's enjoyment and appreciation. Frank's National Park Service career included assignments at the Lake Clark National Park and Preserve in Alaska, Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve in Alaska, Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado, Carlsbad Caverns National Park in New Mexico, and Dinosaur National Monument in Colorado.

For the past 10 years, Frank has served as superintendent of the Keweenaw National Historical Park in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, working to preserve and interpret the region's copper mining history. I offer this tribute to Frank because of my 10 years of personal experience working with Frank and witnessing his passion and enthusiasm for Keweenaw's rich mining history of immigration, labor, vibrant cultures, and changing technologies.

Frank has been an extraordinary park superintendent at Keweenaw. Frank has successfully navigated the challenges of managing a park that owns less than 10 percent of the land within the park boundaries and requires partnering with a variety of public and private organizations. A significant milestone was reached with the completion of the park's General Management Plan, which Frank shepherded. Development of the plan was at times contentious and involved incorporating viewpoints from multiple stakeholders, including local citizens, businesses, landowners, entrepreneurs, corporations, educational institutions, foundations, and government agencies.

Frank has been an enthusiastic advocate for the park, promoting the Keweenaw Peninsula's historic and cultural riches and envisioning the park's role in the future economic development of the region. Where some saw ruined, dilapidated buildings as eyesores, Frank saw them as opportunities. To preserve the historic landscape of copper country, Frank secured funding to make several significant property acquisitions, including the Quincy Mining Company's Pay Office; the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company General Office Building, which is now the Park Headquarters; the C&H Library, which now houses the park's extensive archival collections; C&H Warehouse No. 1, and the Union Building.

A true preservationist, Frank successfully fought to stop the replacement of the city of Quincy's historic water tower, a vital part of the region's cultural landscape, with an underground storage tank. Frank personally researched and produced the original plans for the historic water tower, and now a replicated water tower stands proudly, providing water service to the area's residents and preserving a key feature of the Keweenaw landscape.

In addition to preserving historic buildings, Frank also helped save a large collection of artifacts from the Calumet & Hecla Mining company, which is being cared for and catalogued by one of the Nation's finest professional staff of archivists, curators, and museum technicians. Since Frank's arrival, the park's museum collection has grown from nothing to over 300,000 historic items.

As anyone who has had the opportunity to drive through the park with Frank knows, Frank truly is a visionary. One is quickly transported back in time to the 19th century, when the Keweenaw produced 85 percent of the Nation's copper. Frank makes the history of "copper country" come alive: the sounds of the immigrants arriving, the smells of pasties wafting from lunch pails descending into the deep mine shafts, the tremors from the strikes of 1913 caused by unfair labor conditions. His enthusiasm in relation to rehabilitating and interpreting the historic properties scattered across the park is contagious. Thanks to Frank, visitors to the Keweenaw can truly experience what it was like to be part of the mining community during the industrial revolution.

Frank's dedication to preserving and interpreting the history of the Keweenaw, and his many years of public service is truly an example to others. His enthusiasm, vision, and proactive approach have given the people of Keweenaw, MI and our Nation a great gift.

Thank you, Frank, for your service, and congratulations on your retirement.

TRIBUTE TO MONTE ZUCKER

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to one of our Nation's preeminent photographers, Monte Zucker. Mr. Zucker has been a creative force in his field for over 50 years. Through his brilliant eye and focused lens, he has earned a place in the annals of photographic masters.

Monte Zucker created contemporary standards for lighting and composition in photographic portraiture. His work is beloved by his clients who cherished the memories so beautifully captured on film. His work is also admired by his peers, who recognize the unique signature and integrity in his work.

Mr. Zucker has been mentor to the next generation of photographers. He has taken a leadership role in training emerging artists who, like him, aspire to capture special moments and create memories for families to treasure for years to come.

He is an impressive artist and a caring and compassionate member of his community. In 2002, the UN named him Portrait Photographer of the Year. He has made an incredible difference in the world of photography, and it is a pleasure to bring his extraordinary work to the attention of my colleagues.

TRIBUTE TO BRUCE R. JAMES

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, as chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing, I want to commend and pay tribute to Bruce R. James, the 24th public printer, who has announced he will retire from his post as chief executive officer of the Government Printing Office on January 3, 2007.

At the President's request, Bruce came out of retirement to take office at the GPO in December 2002. Since then, he has worked tirelessly to transform that venerable institution from a printing agency into a 21st century digital information processing facility. After a period of factfinding and consultation with GPO's stakeholders, he issued a strategic vision for the GPO's future that has guided the management of the agency ever since. Under the plan, he initiated the effort to construct a future digital system to organize, manage, and output authenticated Government information in a broad range of online and print formats. He led efforts to modernize the GPO's plant operations supporting Congress. He assisted the State Department's development and issuance of the new electronic U.S. passport and has led efforts to further enhance the GPO's security and intelligent documents operation. He worked with the library community to ensure the continued transition to predominately
